BIRTH DEFECT RESEARCH FOR CHILDREN

How to find FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE?

Caring for a child with birth defects can be very challenging especially when there are also financial concerns. Every parent wants to ensure that their child receives the best medical care available. Unfortunately, far too many families do not have health insurance and cannot afford the medical care needed for a child with birth defects.

We hope that this fact sheet helps you find the necessary resources to care for your child and alleviates financial strain. There are many government programs, non-profit organizations and local service clubs that can help. Please review this fact sheet for a listing of government programs and non-profit organizations that provide assistance for children with various birth defects.

Financial Assistance

Where to start: You are likely to find the most financial assistance from the government. To find the government programs you may qualify for go to www.govbenefits.gov and fill out the questionnaire under the “Benefits” tab. The website will then give you a listing of all government programs for which you qualify. GovBenefits.gov is the official benefits website of the U.S. government, with information on over 1,000 benefit and assistance programs. Another helpful resource is the www.DisabilityInfo.gov website which connects you to the federal government’s disability-related information and resources.

Below are some of the government programs that you will find at www.govbenefits.gov

Medicaid: The Medicaid Program provides medical benefits to low-income people who have no medical insurance or have inadequate medical insurance.

To find out whether your child is eligible to receive Medicaid benefits, contact your state Medicaid office. Phone numbers for each state office can be obtained through this website: <http://cms.hhs.gov/contactcms/> or for general information visit <http://www.cms.hhs.gov/home/medicaid.asp>

Social Security: Social Security provides many benefit programs. For example, the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program pays benefits to disabled adults and children who have limited income and resources.

To find out if your child may be eligible for any of the benefits SSA administers, visit <http://best.ssa.gov> or call Social Security’s toll-free number: 800-772-1213. If you are hearing impaired, please call Social Security’s toll-free TTY number: 800-325-0778

CHIP: The Children’s Health Insurance Program is jointly financed by the Federal and State governments and is administered by the States. CHIP has allocated about $20 billion over 10 years to help states insure low-income children who are ineligible for Medicaid but cannot afford private insurance.

For more information about this program, visit the www.govbenefits.gov website and enter the program name and your resident state into the search box or visit www.insurekidsnow.gov to be matched with a program in your state.

What you can do on your own

Check with family members to see if they belong to a service club (like the Kiwanis, Lions or Civitans) that may help to raise funds for your child's medical needs. You may also want to contact your church and local hospitals to see if they offer any assistance to families with children who have medical/special needs. Hospital social workers are often a very good resource for locating your state's assistance programs and organizations. Another way to raise funds is to organize your own fund-raising event. It doesn't have to be a large-scale event. It could be something as simple as a barbeque with an admission fee. You can contact local merchants to get food and door prizes donated. Remember your family members and friends want to help but don't know how; a fundraising event is an easy way for them to contribute.
